Founder Type: Hacker, Hustler, Visionary

Below are the 3 main personality types needed for a successful start-up.

WHICH ONE ARE YOU?

NOTE – Share your personality type on your individual wall.

The Hacker

There is only one thing that the Hacker focuses on: product, product, product. The brains of the operation, their entire job is to make sure that the required tech and hardware is up to scratch. From the get-go the Hacker should be able to conceptualize what the design of the product should be like—what people should expect and why it's amazing.

Personality traits:

- Analytical
- Structured
- Reliable
- Focused

The Hustler

The Hustler is simultaneously the doer and the taskmaster of the group, setting the pace and making sure everyone else keeps up. The hustler helps sell the product/service created by the startup. The Hustler is not defined by position or title, but by attitude.

Personality traits:

- Disciplined
- Extroverted
- Growth mindset
- Networker

The Visionary

The Visionary is the one who sees into the future. They have that unique ability to articulate that are a dream to others. To convince the skeptics among the customers, market, and investors, and inspire the rest of the team. Their job is, at all times, people-facing. While not always the best at the detail-oriented stuff, the visionary is all about the big picture. They have the responsibility of working on their business, not just in it.

Personality traits:

- Creative
- Imaginative
- Foresighted
- People-facing

Activity - 2 (Individual)

DISC is a behavior assessment tool based on psychologist William Marston's work, which centers on 4 different behavioral traits. This theory was then developed into a behavioral assessment tool by industrial psychologist Walter Vernon Clarke.

Summarizing the DISC Traits

- D stands for the DOMINANT Type which is OUTGOING and TASK-ORIENTED.
- I stands for the INFLUENTIAL Type which is OUTGOING and PEOPLE-ORIENTED.
- S stands for the STEADINESS Type which is RESERVED and PEOPLE-ORIENTED.
- C stands for the CONSCIENTIOUS Type which is RESERVED and TASK-ORIENTED.

A CAUTIONARY NOTE about this (or any other similar) test:

The main misuse of DISC or any personality model is to assume that a person only has ONE trait. That is not the case. Each person has all traits to varying degrees.

Any such methodology that boxes people in with ONE trait is unproductive and inaccurate.

Activity - 3 (Team)

Form your Startup Team

Goal:

Form a diverse team (~6 per team)

Look at the individual walls of your peers and build a diverse team.
(Visionary/Hacker/Hustler', Semester, Branch, Gender, Traits (D, I, S, C), Hobbies/Interests, etc)

Create an open group (pseudo name for now) with instructors and all the team members.

Activity - 4 (Team)

Know your Team

Instructions:

1. Partition your virtual KG Cardboard into number of members + 1 sections. For example, if your team consists of 5 members, you will create 6(5+1) sections.
1. Fill individual sections with answers (one Post-it/Text-box for each of below):
  - a. What best describes you? (1 word/sentence)
  - b. Who's your role model?
  - c. Happiest moment of your life.
  - d. The most difficult incident of your life.
  - e. One thing your team should know about you to get along well.
  - f. One game changing idea
1. For the last section; find 10 things you have in common with every other person in the team and fill it. NOTE – The teams may not select body parts or types of clothing as commonalities.
